at the Postoffice at Wheeling, W. Va., as

Execution of a Delayed Sentence General Daval resigned his commission as Internal Revenue Collector for West Virginia. He did not resign because he desired to be relieved of the duties of his office. He offered his resignation to assert his manhood. The Com missioner of Internal Revenue, a fierce Arthur man, had given General Duval to understand in plain terms that he was in debted to President Arthur for continu ance in office, and that he was expected to show his gratitude by his works.

The district conventions and the State conventions were drawing near; there was a determined effort to rig the convenions for Arthur, and so important a par of the machinery as a Collector's office was not to be overlooked. General Duva was not willing to hold under the Com missioner's terms; hence his resignation very animated correspondence was exchanged, in the course of first that he never had intimate to General Duval that he was expected to use his office for the Presi-The administration had been caught and vas squirming. have regarded the letter of resignation as dead. Any public reason that may exist now for reviving the resignation and acting on it has existed through nine months past. It is idle to look for reasons of pub lie policy in this disgusting proceeding There are no such reasons. The adminis tration wanted to visit some kind of pun ishment upon General Duval for his inde nence and to give some reward to Mr. McCormick for his ineffectual efforts to President Arthur has done many good things. He has than this. He ought to have allowed General Duval to remain until his Demo cratic successor was appointed. He ought not to have nominated a man of Mr. Mc-Cormick's striking disqualifications.

In Birmingham, England, there is building for the London & Northwestern Railway a piano-forte railway carriage, and the London Queen explains that "appliances will be provided by which the sound of the carriage wheels will be deadened so as to preserve the harmony of the music."

A side-wheel steamer, 270 feet keel, 40 feet beam and 16 feet depth of hold, is now building at Detroit for the Detroit and Cleveland route, which is promised to be the finest and fastest on the Great Lakes. Her cost will be $275,000, and she is to be completed for the season of 1886.

When vessels or timber sink to great depths in the ocean the pressure is so great that water is forced into the pores of the wood and it becomes too heavy to rise again. Ever when a ship is brok up the detached portions sink like le. The pressure makes it impossible divers to descend to any greath depth.

New York's New Governor

Jew York Tribune.

Governor Hill has the reputation of being the most bashful of men, and various anecdotes illustrating this are current in Albany. One of these accounts for the singularly youthful appearance which he presents in the sets of photographs of Assemblymen, during the time that he was in the Legislature. The first note that a new member receives on arriving at the Capitol is usually a circular from a photographic establishment, asking him to call and sit for a picture, which will appear in the Legislative album annually made. About three-quarters of the members respond to the first call, and a second circular brings nearly all the retrainder. The few who do not respond are then personally waited on, various applications. But D. B. Hill, of Chemung, in that year was found to be incorrigible. The circulars had no effect, the photographer's call, had no effect; and he succeeded in cluding the visit of the young lady. Time passed, and the artist was in despair. Many shums had been ordered, but none could be completed without the pathoraum of the bashful Republican party know, or have reason to believe, that the administration was cracking the lash over office-holders to whip them in. To show that there was no such intention in General Duval's case, his resignation was not accepted. It was generally understood that its acceptance would be left to President Cleveland. General Duval expected to go out when Cleveland went in, and with this in view he has been shaping his private affairs.

It appears, therefore, that until now both the administration and the collector have regarded the letter of resignation as the many exist.

How They Vote in Germany.

A striking feature of the German muni-ipal system is its entire independence of national politics. No issues but those aris-ng out of municipal questions are allowto influence the city elections. Every ale inhabitant twenty-four years of age as a right to voteon municipal questions, ovided that he has his own household has a right that he has his own lousehold and is not dependent on father or mother; that he has not received alms from the nablle funds within twelve years; that he has paid all municipal dues; that he occupies a house or pursues a trade with two employes; that he pays an income tax or a class tax. Under one or another of these five conditions all industrious persons in the city are included. That all votes should count equally is recarded as unbusiness-like. The ar-That all votes should count equally is regarded as unbusiness-like. The arrangement adopted to meet this point of view is this: Voters are divided into three classes, each of which elects one-third of the City Council. To the first class are assigned so many of the largest taxpayers as pay one-third of the taxes assessed; to the second as many as in the aggregate pay the second third of the taxes; to the third class belong all not included in the first and second. Each of the three classes elects forty-two members of the Council, its influence upon questions of Conseil, its influence upon questions of the Council, its influence upon questions of finance being kept in strict equality with its tax payments. The City Cauncil of Berlin has long been conspicuous for the educational and financial standing of its members. Election to it is accounted an honor to which the ablest men in the city assire.
